NOT HIS INTENTION.

FRIEND .- I read your magazine article on the campaign issues.

THE STATESMAN .- Did you? I trust I did not make myself clear!

NOT INTENTIONAL.

MRS. CATNIP. - There, now! What 'd you want to go and fall downstairs for?

LITTLE AMOS .- I did n't want to, Maw; I could n't help it.

HE GIVES HER ONE.

SHE. - Where can I find a short statement of the objections to free silver?

HE. - Why, it would make dry goods go up.

HIS CHOICE OF BOSSES.

FIRST CITIZEN.—You support Platt and yet you say you don't like one-man power.

SECOND CITIZEN.—Yes; but I'm afraid of the-otherman power.

WHEN THE European Powers go out on a concert tour they find that their China bookings pay the best.

WE ARE a glorious sisterhood of states, with Sister Ohio getting the bulk of the pretty new things.

THE "Cape to Cairo" railroad promises to be the most costly line on the globe.

SAME THING.

DAUGHTER.-If I can't have Percy Pinkhedd for a husband, I want nobody!

FATHER .- Well, what 's the difference?

A VISION OF PROGRESS.

when will come the happy day When wars will cease; When land and sea will own the sway Of white-robed Peace? Forsooth! when every man can shoot And make bulls'-eyes

At any range; then will be mute War's clarion cries.

Forever mute; for, if men shot With aim so straight, They 'd never, never fight, I wot; They 'd arbitrate.

HOW TO EFFECT A CHANGE.

MAGISTRATE.- I think thou art the same man I let off last week. PRISONER. - But if Your Worship will let me off again I will feel like a different man!

A REFLECTION. THE FARMER.—Yes; I had a talk with the new Congressman.

ACQUAINTANCE.— What do you think of him?

FARMER.— Well, I reckon some fellers that could n't make bunco-steerin' pay must have gone into politics.

THE TROUBLE IN UTOPIA.

T DOES N'T matter just how it came about, but the inhabitants of Utopia agreed unanimously that all wealth should be equally divided. It does n't matter, either, how they managed to carry out their project. They did it and each inhabitant found himself worth one hundred and three thousand five hundred and forty dollars and some odd cents. Now, a man of quiet tastes can live on that amount of money without working; and most of the inhabitants were people of quiet tastes who did n't like work any more than you and I do. So a great many of them determined to live on their money in ease and comfort.

On the very day of the distribution, the Utopian Capitalist lost his cook. She was just as well satisfied with a hundred thousand dollars as he was, and she resigned to live in ease and comfort. The Capitalist made his own fire the morning after the distribution. His children went to the butcher's, the baker's, and the grocer's, but found that those worthy tradesmen had retired from business; they, also, being quite satisfied with a hundred thousand dollars. But for this awkward circumstance, the Capitalist would have had something to eat that morning. And it is quite probable that he would have purchased at least three new suits of clothes if his tailor had not decided to renounce tailoring to enjoy his newly-acquired wealth. For reasons, which it is unnecessary to enumerate, the Utopian Capitalist decided to postpone an intended purchase of new furniture, and he missed a number of theatrical attractions to which he had confidently looked forward.

he

The Capitalist concluded that while it is not, from every point of view, a good thing to be satisfied, still we have the consolation of knowing that it will not last long.

And yet, the moral is not that "whatever is, is right."

A SOLUTION.

HE. — I wonder why it is that married women are so much more interesting than single ones?

SHE. - Probably because they have learned how to conceal their opinion of men.

CANDOR.

Here the Candid Lady drew near to the Floor Walker.

"I have kleptomania," she said. "What would you advise me to take for it?"

INJUSTICE.

PALETTE (who has been trying to do a picture of the devil). — Do you think that is a good conception, old man?

BRUSH. — I don't believe he is as bad as he is painted,

CROSSED.

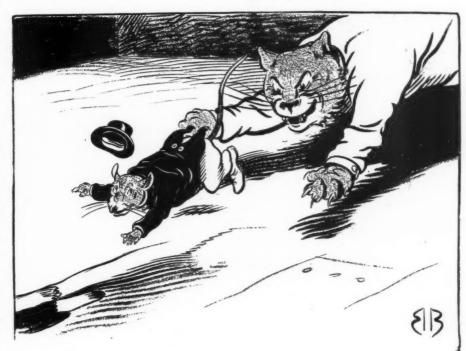

The woman wrung her hands hysterically.

"I have crossed the rubicund!" she cried.

The man, her husband, stood aghast.

"The red-faced cook, you know!" faltered the woman, in a faint voice.

It is always harder to lose a fight that we begun ourselves.

LORD," said one of the officers in the war balloon,

"you don't observe any traps, do you?"
"Traps?" said his lordship, the captain, gazing around him in the circumambient air. "No; I'm sure there are no traps up here!"

They descended and reported to the general in command, who soon afterward found that the simplest, though not the most satisfactory way to discover a trap is to walk into it.

CONSIDERATE.

"They say he is a very careful, conscientious husband."

"He is. Whenever he is going to be home to dinner he always lets his wife know beforehand."

AN APOSTATE.

FIRST POPULIST .- Old man Winds says last year was one of the most prosperous he ever had.

SECOND POPULIST .- He does? The old hypocrite! And only a year ago he was pertendin' ter have the interests of the people ter heart!

AT THE RECITAL.

FIRST PHILISTINE. - What is a "movement," anyway? SECOND PHILISTINE. - Anywhere from twenty to sixty contortions, I should judge.

ETHEL .- Then it must be an actress!

THE CONVENTIONAL.

"You are one hundred and thirty-eight years old and have voted in every Presidential election!" repeated the freak editor, writing furiously, while joy radiated from his every lineament.

"Yes; but-"

The editor's pencil dropped from his nerveless fingers.

SKIRTS.

The reform element was, for the nonce, plainly in the political ascendancy in Dahomey, and the king had no alternative to yielding to their demand that the Amazons wear skirts. The royal mandate issued accordingly.

As for the Amazons, they stood aghast.

"We shall certainly be taken for Gordon Highlanders!" protested these choice troops, in the utmost consternation.

PROSPERITY.

FIRST Dog .- Barker is getting up in the world, is n't he? SECOND DOG.—Yes, indeed! He has everything the heart of a dog could wish, except a pedigree.

HIS NATURAL INFERENCE.

"By heck, Bill!" heartily ejaculated an Arkansaw citizen, who had been absent from his native village for a few weeks. "I'm glad to git home again! How's everything? That reminds me; when I went away Hank Lazzenberry and Jack Fagg was sorter squabblin' over the ownership of a coon-dog. "Aw, that was settled a right smart spell ago!" replied his friend, who had staid at home.

"That so? Which got killed?"

"There! a beautiful target painted on a sheet of wrapping-paper!

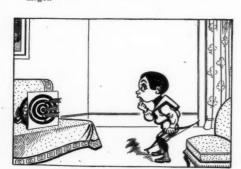

"Now, I will place the target right in front of the head of the drum. Willy with his little bow and arrow won't do a thing when he spies that target."

WILLY.—Oh, cracky! Just see what a boss target Uncle Bob's made me. Say! I guess I 'll take a shot at dat bull's-eye!

"Hoo! A bull's-eye de first shot!

arm has to be cut off. Do these prophets of woe ever stop to compare the picture they draw with the reality? According to their argument, hardly any marriage would endure longer than the law compelled it to. The great mass of our husbands and wives, old and young, are living together not because they find their greatest happiness in so doing, but because the law opposes an obstacle to their separation. It is an amusing view, in its superficiality. But it is libelous, also. It is a libel on the American family. We have enough faith in American family life to believe it would go on about as it does if every marriage and divorce law were wiped off the books to-morrow. Think about it a moment. Are the married people you know living together because of the law, or because they want to? How many husbands and wives do you know who are restrained from separating only by law? Would not the most of your married acquaintances feel hurt by such a suggestion? So much for the persons - and we are pleased to believe that they constitute the great body of our society -who do not want divorce; who would be unaffected even if divorce could be had for the asking.

CARTOONS AND COMMENTS.

REPUBLICAN
LARCENY.

"HE COULD N'T stand prosperity!" has been the apposite comment on many a good man's failure. With a trifle more of the predatory policy back of the Hanna-Payne ship-bill, it will make a back of the Hanna-Payne ship-bill, it will make a choice epitaph for the present Republican administration. Here is a specimen of Trust legislation which is quite everything that the wildest Bryanite in his wildest moment ever alleged against the party in power. Why is a ship-builder entitled to bounties over a house-builder or a farmer, a merchant, or a plain, every-day laborer? And why, especially, when our merchant marine already has more than it can do, when the excess of export trade must of itself act to produce more American ships - when there is more natural and legitimate demand for the labor of shipbuilding, in short, than there is for almost any of the other kinds of labor that have to worry along without bounties? That is the absurd side of it. The vicious side is that the bill, in addition to giving $9,000,000 a year of the people's money for twenty years to ship-builders, has plain, ugly, Government-nursed monopoly for its purpose. The right under this bill to contract for the twenty-year bounty will expire in ten years. During the ten years ship-builders will have the privilege of contracting to receive the bounty for twenty years from the date of contract. The man who would begin building ships ten years from now, therefore, would be at the mercy of a bounty-fed, monopolistic Trust, which would be sure of its privileges for twenty years. There is a specimen of Trust legislation, flagrant and vicious. We do not think that William McKinley, good servant of the people as he has been, is so firmly entrenched in their affections that he can afford to sign it if it be passed.

A VEXED QUESTION.

It is fashionable in press and pulpit just now to lament the prevalence of divorce. Social chaos is predicted from it—the decay of family life, of personal morality and of social stability. But do the facts really warrant this direful reading of them? We are inclined to think it would be as logical to predict the bodily dismembering of all individuals because now and then a leg or an

Yet, divorce is prevalent; increasingly prevalent, some contend. If this be true we accept it as a sign that superstition is giving way to common-sense in the matter of marriage. There has always been a certain percentage of imperfect - impossible - marriages. If Society has awakened to the necessity of weeding these out, it speaks well for its sense of self-preservation and for the esteem in which it has come to hold true marriage. Accurately speaking, marriage is not necessarily "holy." It is just what the married pair can make it. A few marriages are no holier than real estate deals; less sacred than the ordering of a dinner or a suit of clothes. It will be so as long as we are less than omniscient. Whom God hath joined together no man can put asunder. Whom man may put asunder God never joined. And the quicker they sunder themselves the better. Of all social mechanisms there is none so productive of every high and good thing, spiritual and material, none so valuable to the State, as marriage when it is marriage. When it is not marriage there is no mechanism provocative of one-tenth the miscellaneous deviltry, more destructive to the higher nature of the individual, or more dangerous to the peace and order of the State. An imperfect marriage is probably the only perfect inharmony mankind is permitted to achieve. And by imperfect marriage we do not mean, necessarily, one where there is gross violation of the decencies of life by either party: we mean one in which there is simply a lack of that mutual attraction which alone makes a marriage; or, what is commonly called incompatibility. Schools of philosophy differ as to how far the State may rightly restrain or regulate the individual. But, if the State has any right to interfere in such matters at all, surely its first duty is to provide an escape, and an easy one, from such marriages. It would do better, of course, to prevent them if it could, to place such restrictions about marriage as would insure a sounder guarantee from marrying couples that they are fitted for each other. But when marrying is so easy and is done in the haphazard way we do it, the wonder is that there are so few failures. Experience has shown that these failures are consummated with the marriage; and that it is impossible to correct them by forbidding divorce. If the State is to meddle any further with the institution it should be in the direction of making marriage harder and divorce easier.

IST WEEK IN CONGRESS.

"The rottenness of politics is appalling. Mentioned the Wrongs of the Oppressed in one of the cloak-rooms of the House to-day and noticed a smile on the faces of all the old members."

2ND WEEK.

"I see a chance to right the Wrongs of the Oppressed. The notorious Universal Control Company, the new syndicate of all the Trusts, has a bill up, and what a warm wallop I am writing against it!"

3D WEEK.

"Great Scott! what it does cost to live in Washington! Rent alone $1,700. I see the early finish of my $5,000 per. An emissary of the Universal Control Company hinted an infamous proposition to me to-day."

4TH WEEK.

"Politics is rotten but interesting. Wonder where all these fellows get their money? Went last night to a swell stag-dinner given by the Universal Control man. Some regular tobasco-sauce vaudeville turns between the courses. Hope my constituents won't get on."

5TH WEEK.

"Mark, himself, has been to see me about that bill. A man really ought to look at both sides of a question and stay by the Grand Old Party, if possible."

6тн WEEK.

"Ye Gods! it does cost to live in Washington! I seem to be about the only lobster in my set. I don't hear any of the others worrying about money. They 're all going to boost that bill, by the way. Politics is —"

7TH WEEK.

"I'm afraid the Wrongs of the Oppressed are largely imaginary. Say! what Washington life does to $5,000 a year is a sin and a shame! That Universal Control man seems to be a very nice sort of a fellow.

8TH WEEK.

"No man can live on his Congressional salary. Wish my constituents would n't be so impatient. It takes time to right the Wrongs of the Oppressed. Am almost convinced the Universal Control Company would prove their real benefactors in the end."

IOTH WEEK.

"Voted for the Universal Control bill, after all. Think it will be for the real good of the downtrodden. Set up a stable and wired my wife to come on and open her social campaign. Guess I will manage to meet the expense. Did not deliver my ringing speech against the bill, but have had it printed in the Congressional Record and sent a marked copy to the Back Home Banner. Universal Control Company composed of very nice gentlemen."

NEAR THE TERM'S END.

"Politics is all right after you once learn the rules of the game, Washington is the only place of residence and living is comparatively cheap, too, considering. By the way, I must begin to get together some more of that old salve about the Wrongs of the Oppressed. I want to come báck.

Perfection is attained by experiment, experience, and improved methods and materials.

This is as true in cigar making as in any other industry.

The General Arthur Cigar

is a perfect cigar because it not only has behind it the ripest experience and the best workmanship obtainable, but it is made by methods and of materials beyond the reach of any but the largest cigar manufacturing establishment in America and probably in the world.

This cigar represents everything that large capital and unequalled resources can put into it.

It is made of choice Havana tobacco, bought before the war in Cuba commenced and stored in such a temperature as has constantly added to its quality.

It will give you as pleasant a smoke as an imported cigar but without the ill after-effects which result from habitually smoking the latter.

If you can't find it at your dealer's we will send you a dozen General Arthurs in a tin box for $1.00. You certainly ought to give this celebrated cigar a trial.

For a 2-cent stamp we will send you an odd and striking little folder

HAROLD.- Why, no; -he looked just as if he were still keeping them!

AN EASY TASK.

"The society blue book," said the conscientious one, thoughtfully. "I should think it would be an irksome task to attempt to decide who should go in and who remain out. I suppose that the blue book editors take into consideration people's family and social position and worth."

"Not at all! They have a much simpler way of deciding who belongs to society."

"May I ask what?"

"They simply ask if one is able and willing to pay the price of the book.".

PLAUSIBLE.

"I wonder if the clown is just as jolly in private life?"

"I understand he 's twice as jolly - because he does n't have to be."

THE SECRET OF IT.

MRS. BINGO .- You must have said something to Mrs. Spinkerly that offended her.

BINGO .- I merely remarked that my experience showed me that all human beings were pretty much alike, and she turned her back.

MRS. BINGO .- You forgot she has a baby.

THE PROBABLE REASON.

MRS. HORNBEAK (in the midst of her reading). - Ezry, why do the heathen FARMER HORNBEAK. - Huh! I guess you'd rage, too, Almiry, if other people were always accusin' you of ragin'!
